HONGKONG, March 4th, 1899.

THE IGNORANCE IN EUROPE on the subject of China is truly appalling. In a late Times appears a communication from Berlin in which it is stated that a number of guilds and Chinese at Amoy are anxious to assume German nationality and that the German Consul there has referred the matter home, and we are asked to accept this as a proof of the estimation in which the Germans are held by the Chinese. No doubt the Germans in China are as much respected and appreciated by the Chinese as the British or any other European race, but the contention that that respect is shown by the Chinese wishing to assume German nationality is to reduce the thing to a farce. Putting aside the absurdity of a "guild" assuming or taking any nationality, the Chinese, as everyone familiar with them knows, when they seek foreign nationality are anxious to obtain its cover, not out of respect for foreigners, but either to escape taxation or to gain protection from their own officials. In proof of this statement let the following be tried. Give the Amoy merchants the German nationality they covet, then let the German Government put a tax on those merchant ships and on the goods and produce they deal in, in the tax to be slightly in excess of what they can get through the lekin or what it would cost them to secure British nationality by paying a British subject to lend them his name. Then let a census of the German subjects be taken. The number of Chinese who would register as such would, we fancy, be small when compared with those who would elect to remain Chinese or be the authorized agents of British firms or individuals. It is useless to trespass on our readers' time and patience by illustrations of imaginary cases when in their every day experience they meet real ones of the kind; but the public at home come under a different category and we have no doubt but that to many of them the impression was conveyed of a large and influential body of Chinese longing to place themselves under the banner of the Fatherland, actuated thereto by an admiration of that country and its institutions. The publication of paragraphs such as the one above referred to serves to increase the delusions and perplexities surrounding the subject of China, a subject on which it is important that the fullest and clearest light should be thrown.

Now the act of conveying wrong impressions confined to the newspapers, Professor DOUGLAS—quite unwittingly we admit—is engaged in the same and, where ignorance is so general, not too difficult task. In his speech before the London Institution he is reported to have said "A great disqualification, possibly a natural one, ... had also been shown by merchants to take up their residence at the outports, and at several of the treaty ports not a single British merchant was to be found. It was high time that it should be recognized that it was only by persistently pushing the trade at the treaty ports, and as far inland as possible that our merchants could expect to add considerably to the volume of British commerce,"

Then follows something about the difficulty of learning Chinese being exaggerated. Again: "Though by the Chefoo Convention the right of navigating the Yangtze Kiang from Ichang to Chinkiang was accorded to foreigners only one steamer had ever attempted the passage." He adds: "If the passage of the Yangtze above Ichang was to be made really navigable the British Government must with the consent of the Taungli Yamen undertake the conservancy of the river. A little dynamite would soon clear away the rocks which are the main sources of peril." We will not dispute Professor DOUGLAS's technical knowledge of the application of dynamite to the Yangtze rapids, though we have no impression that the Shu-tan, the Tatung, and Shantung rapids—consisting as they do of vast masses of rock which in the winter form islands and in summer, with a rise of 60 feet in the river, are those most dangerous obstacles to navigation, namely rocks just as wide—will try the greatest engineering skill before they can be overcome; but he said as it may, according to the Professor's own showing until something in the nature of dynamite is applied they can't be made "really navigable," and in the meantime it is not to be wondered at that the shipowner does not think the amount to be earned in freight is equal to the risks his vessel would run when making the passage. In fact the merchant's reply to both of the above contentions is short, sharp, and decisive. He says, "it doesn't pay," and in those few words the whole situation is summed up: One would imagine from speeches like the one we are quoting with also from some of our Consular Reports that the paces for all evils in China is for the merchant to learn Chinese and reside in an outport. It does not seem to strike these theorists that the merchant is quite willing to go anywhere and do anything the Government will allow him, provided he can make a profit, and that it is because he is unable to make a profit that he shows a disinclination to reside at the outports. Professor DOUGLAS admits that the disinclination is "possibly a natural one." It is difficult to conceive a more natural one in view of the reason the merchant gives.

The same authority tells us that it is only by persistently pushing the trade at the treaty ports and as far inland as possible that our merchants can expect to add to the volume of British commerce. There are one or two phrases here which would be more useful if their meaning were more clearly defined. For instance, what does he mean by "pushing" and "as far inland as possible?" A, a British merchant, lives at, say, Samsui, and imports cotton yarn from B, a Chinese merchant, who lives at the same. It costs A to live at Samsui $100 per month, board and lodging. It costs B, say, $30. For the sake of argument we will say that it costs both the same to get their yarn up to Samsui in the way of freight and duty. Both can send their goods into any part of China under a transit pass. Both accompany their goods to say, Yunnan. The foreigner, even if he goes in the same junk, will probably require separate accommodation and his expenses at the lowest estimate will amount to $1 per day. The Chinaman will spend his time with the junk master and live on 20 to 30 cents per day. On arrival, at their destination the never failing "teoli" or "joli" "shui" is levied; both protest against it. After a few days the Chinese merchant and compounds with the lekin, pays up, and goes back to Samsui. The foreigner won't pay, stays a month (cost at least $40) to see if it is levied, then goes away. As soon as he has left the lekin levy the "teoli" in full on the Chinese holder of the goods. He writes to the foreign merchant who sold them to the public it is evident that he made it worth their while to do so. Should the present representations be taken for granted that the Peak Hotel is allowed to continue in private ownership the Military authorities will sooner or later make a bid for it, and possibly also for Craigieburn.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

[SUPPLIED TO THE "DAILY PRESS"]

London, 1st March.—INDISPOSITION OF THE POPE.

The Pope is suffering from the effects of a prolonged swoon and has been ordered to bed for absolute repose. His Holiness is now somewhat better.

GERMANY.

Horst von Below, speaking in the Reichstag, said that unless the outrages on Germans at Teitao (T'ai-tao) were severely punished, or if the outrages were repeated, China would incur grave consequences.

Referring to the Anglo-German Agreement, Horst von Below said that it deals rather with contingencies than with actualities.

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The English Church Union has decided to memorialise the Queen, the Archbishops and Bishops, and both Houses of Parliament, denying the right of the Crown or Parliament to determine the doctrine and discipline of the Ceremonial of the Church of England.

The Union decides that it is not prepared to bar the principles of the Church for establishment on the ground that the goods will be sold.

CHURCH NOTES.

The following items are taken from the monthly "Notes" issued by Rev. H. J. Cobbold, Chaplain in St. Paul's Cathedral.

The Rev. J. T. Johnson arrived from England, February 29th. Comes to take up the work of Assistant Chaplain. We welcome him among us, and trust that his life and work here may be a blessing to himself and to those to whom he ministers.

We are glad to hear that steps are being taken for the appointment of an English Chaplain whose duty it will be to minister to the Chinese in Canton and other Treaty Ports in Southern China, where a long time no provision of the kind has been made.

The Bishop of Victoria goes to Fowhoo soon after Easter.

Bishop Burnside, sometime Bishop of Victoria, has been staying in Hongkong, working on a translation of the New Testament in Chinese.

He is shortly to Fak-tai, where he will minister to the Chinese.

We regret to say that during the month of February there were two occasions when the Cathedral was forcibly entered at night, and some silver and brass vessels stolen. A whole collection of Communion Plate in silver, belonging to the Cathedral, was taken away.

Whether the syndicate will ever recover the amount so expended is a question time alone will tell.

It is far from our intention to infer that there is nothing for foreign merchants to do at the treaty ports or in the interior when they are allowed to reside in the latter. On the contrary, with an honest administration at Peking they can undertake, my all big concerns which the Chinese themselves are unable to organize or work, such as mining, railways, manufactures, steamship lines, &c., but until the British Government take up the financial reform of the country the foreigner is likely to find his efforts to engage in any of these either thwarted completely or else hampered by such vexatious restriction and regulation that the same result will be arrived at. The ridiculous and absurd Mining Regulations issued by the Taungli Yamen and the restrictions imposed on the inland waters, making both impossible as enterprises for the safe investment of capital, are samples of these. To either of these exceedingly important points does Professor DOUGLAS refer, otherwise than by informing us that by steam navigation on the inland waters a vast saving would be made in time!

H.M.R. Visitors returned to harbour yesterday from gun practice.

The German cruiser Cornflower leaves for Samoa to-day and will carry a mail.

H.M.S. Powerful goes to Manila on Tuesday next to relieve the Narcissus, whose commission has expired.

We are informed by Messrs. John D. Hun-phreys and Son, General Managers, Oliver-Freehills Mines, Limited, that they have received the following telegram from Manila:—

"Mill can 24 days dredge 350 tons of stone for a yield of 25% of retarded gold."

The following football game will be played on Friday, kick-off 4.30 p.m.—V.C.R. versus H.M.S. Powerful. Owing to similarity of colour of the two teams, the Powerful will play in white. The Recreation team will play in blue. The Powerful team will be white. Goal: Right-backs, Tuohy, and Corlett; half-backs, Henderson, Craig, and A. E. Alves; forward, Yule, Sutton, Stark, Ross, and Henderson.

vincial Treasurer, Sham Chow-hau, who gained so much popularity there, has made a complaint against the Viceregal Tax, the chief of the Leikin

Magistrate, Fui. Pending the investigation of this charge H.M.I.M. the Emperor has de-
